BACKGROUND

The winter may seem like a slow season for your school Learning Garden without active planting, observing, and harvesting activities happening during a prime growing season. This can be the optimum time, however, for students to engage further with the Learning Garden by identifying a topic connected to the Learning Garden that they can “take a side on” and defend.

If the weather allows, consider touring the Learning Garden to introduce this writing – give students time to explore the differences between a fall and winter Learning Garden. You may also consider introducing the activity in the Learning Garden space, doing the student discussion and brainstorming, even writing the first drafts in the Learning Garden.

Opinion writing for intermediate elementary grades should focus on not only distinguishing fact from opinion, but also supporting that opinion with valid reasons and information (facts and details) that clearly connect to their perspective. Students should also be working on how to organize their pieces so that the supporting reasons build a strong argument.

INTRODUCTION

Spend time discussing the following introductory questions:

- Is spending class time in the Learning Garden good for our class? Why?
- Would you tell our principal/another teacher/your parents that we should spend more or less time in the Learning Garden? Why?

LESSON

- If your class responses seem one-sided, you may need to pose the opposite perspective, for example: “Why might [principal/custodian/coach] say we should spend [more/less] time in the Learning Garden?”

1. Review as necessary the components of opinion writing.
2. Have students “Think, Pair, Share” their perspectives from the introduction questions.
3. Allow pairs to share their points of discussion and record all ideas on a chart paper or whiteboard.
4. Share your own opinion topic from the Learning Garden in order to model the writing process. (We recommend using a topic different from the ones posed in the introduction to allow students to present their own opinion and not be tempted to follow yours.)

If using a graphic organizer, model how to use the graphic organizer with your own idea. *Use this opportunity to highlight a classroom focus for writing, for example, organizing reasons to build the strength of an argument.

5. Model drafting your own opinion piece for students.
6. Give students time to solidify their own perspective with reasons and examples and begin drafting their piece.
7. Circulate as needed, reinforcing desired writing techniques with students.
8. As time allows (possibly over the remainder of the week), move through the writing process with the Learning Garden opinion pieces. After drafting, revise and edit your model and then have students revise and edit their own; repeat as necessary.
9. Create a final draft of your model and publish, and have students create a final draft and publish. Lastly, if possible, allow students to share or present their opinion pieces.
10. Use your school’s opinion rubric to score student writing and provide feedback.

CONCLUSION

Have students share key parts of the lesson and review the Key Understandings.

ADDITIONAL WRITING PROMPTS TO CONSIDER

- If you were to change any aspect of our Learning Garden, what would you change? Why?
- Do you think growing your own food is easy or difficult? Why?
- What other ways might we use the Learning Garden in our school?
